

Peggy Strickland has been gleefully involved with theatre in North Georgia ever since she snuck in the back door (so-to-speak) as a chorus member in the Gainesville Theatre Alliance production of Annie in 1984. Whether acting, directing, stage managing, ushering, running sound board, painting set, or pouring punch, she relishes all aspects of the dramatic arts. She feels especially blessed to be a member of the Georgia Mountain Players' family and is humbled by the talent that surrounds her, encourages her, challenges her, and uplifts her. She remains so grateful to our patrons who enable us to perform and nurture us by their presence.

Peggy is a Professor of English and Reading at Gainesville State College where she gets to perform for her students and challenge them to excel. In Gainesville, her longest-playing (and most favorite) role has been as Joe Strickland's wife.
